During his time at Lahainaluna High School, Hercules recalls many fond memories, he said, "I loved the feeling of winning big games with all the teammates that I grew up and played with since we were kids playing Pop Warner"

When it came time for college, Hercules knew he was serious about his football career and decided to play for the Washington State Cougars. He had a great career with the Cougars, where he earned Polynesian Football Hall of Fame College Player of the Year. In December of 2017, Hercules decided to forego his senior year at Washington State and declare for the draft. With his dreams of the NFL in sight, Hercules said his goals for the NFL are to have a healthy and successful career and be a role model to other athletes from the islands. With the draft quickly approaching, April 26th through April 28th, Hercules says he will be happy no matter what happens. GOOD LUCK HERCULES!
